URBAN OASES

No matter how small, no matter how simple, a garden or terrace is the ultimate city luxury

Midcentury teak-and-cane furniture with cushions covered in Perennials fabrics fill the spacious terrace of the duplex apartment of Luigi Caiola and Sean McGill, designed by Fox-Nahem Associates, in Manhattan's Chelsea neighborhood. The plantings are by garden designer Rebecca Cole. ▶

An iron pergola with retractable canvas shades provides protection from the sun on a terrace facing the ocean; armchairs by Michael Taylor Designs have cushions covered in a Perennials fabric, and the flooring is reclaimed terra-cotta pavers. FACING PAGE: The table and cabinet in the dining room are custom made, the chairs are by Berkshire Home & Antiques, and the 18th-century Italian chandelier is from Lucca Antiques.
