A John Armleder disco-ball installation is suspended above the underground pool, whose bottom can be raised to become a dance floor. The flooring is marble, and the walls are limestone; on the other side of the illuminated frosted-glass panel is the screening room.

The kitchen opens to a garden; the island countertop is marble, the sink fittings are by Boffi, and the flooring is reclaimed Belgian bluestone.
